AMERICAN NURSES
CREDENTIALING CENTER

Real Nurses. Real Stories. Real Successes.

Name:

Allyson L. Daniels RN, BSN

Age:

32

Home:

Philadelphia, PA

Nursing specialty:

Pediatric Intensive Care

Professional title:

Staff Nurse, Clinical Level III at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia

Greatest accomplishment:

As the department chairperson of our Quality Practice and Patient Safety Council, I helped to institute, promote, and crystallize a process surrounding our new shared governance structure and Professional Practice Model – a “once in a lifetime” opportunity to improve the level of service and care provided by a nationally-respected Magnet Hospital.

I am:

Audacious, unafraid, bold. I am the fighter who wins by a knockout in the 12th round.

Inspirational quote:

“At the end of every day ask yourself: Did I try as hard as I could and did I do my very best...if the answer is ‘yes,’ then you’ve done exactly what you were put on earth to do. If the answer is ‘no,’ don’t let me find out about it.”

— My mother, Barbara Daniels

I support ANCC because:

Of the organization's unwavering goal of promoting nursing excellence through certification and acknowledging the hard work and accomplishments of nurses working inside ANCC Magnet hospitals. I believe ANCC understands that not only is excellence achieved, it is an on-going, ever-evolving process.

The American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC) certifies nurses in specialty practice areas, accredits continuing nursing education, and recognizes nursing excellence in hospitals through its internationally renowned Magnet Recognition Program, the gold standard for identifying healthcare organizations that provide the very best in nursing care. The Magnet Recognition Program provides a vehicle for disseminating successful practices and strategies among nursing systems. Attaining Magnet status communicates a healthcare organization's determination to provide quality care to patients and a positive practice environment for employees.
